

Colosseum/North American Dental Group Medical Board guideline

At Colosseum/North American Dental Group, we have been meticulous in planning our safe operation of face-to-face care and, accepting that there is no risk free strategy, working very hard to minimise the risks for our teams and for our patients when attending for care or for work.

Covid-19 is very much still here

It is important that we all lead in the fight to contain coronavirus and that means not just observing your local clinic guidance when in practice, but also remembering that there are still a number of government recommended guidelines in each territory which exist for all of our safety and well-being in and out of the workplace. This includes certain markets still in varying degrees of lockdown measures.

Therefore, it is important for the health and well-being of your colleagues and patients that you remember to observe these guidelines when away from your clinics and act as good citizens and also ambassadors of CDG/NADG e.g.:

- Washing your hands all through the pandemic this has been and remains a clear requirement
- “Catch it, Bin it, Kill it” – in relation to sneezing and coughing
- Social distancing: there are various country specific guidelines in relation to social distancing and how we should observe this – please ensure you offer an example to others in and out of the workplace.
- Seeing friends and family: there are clear rules about seeing people from other households and whether this is inside or outside – make sure you are doing this please.
- Shopping, restaurants, cinemas, other entertainments – local guidelines protect the local population – minimise your risk and that of others.
- Travel – please consider our travel advisory and make sure your local public health guidelines are followed

As colleagues in a healthcare profession we ask you to subscribe to our clear ambition to act responsibly, minimise the risk of spread and ultimately play our part in minimising the risk of adverse outcomes due to the virus.

Speak up if you see risk developing!

Let's continue to represent our company with the highest of standards and lead the way as the true healthcare professionals we all are.
